All,

In three weeks' time, it will be 5th year anniversary of Lao Mou's passing. I invite sharing your memories of him with us in this forum.

He passed away on Oct. 17, 2004.

Wow, time flied like an arrow. His passing was as if happened yesterday.

Lao Mou ran and jumped like an antelope. I asked him how he did it. He lifted his feet and showed me that he had flatfeet. He said when he was young, his teacher told him that, with flatfeet, he couldn't run or jump. He was dared to excel in the field. He did not want be laughed as a flatfoot so he tried harder. That's why he could run and jump like no other.

From Lao Mou, I learned "a burning desire to win" is a key to success. Our CTU ping pong team could use Lao Mao's motto to win.

CH,

Thank you very much for suggesting this wonderful idea. Lao Mou was a great classmate and great friend. He was always so supportive and optimistic that every meeting and chat with him served as a most effective "upper". Even now, five years since his passing, those wonderful memories of him still maintain 100% effective.

Here are a few instances of those memories:

1. I had the odd habit of needing to go see movie to relieve some pressure before big exams. Lao Mou was always available to help. While he complained about the possibility of failing the exam he would walk cheerfully with me to downtown Hsinchu, watched a movie, then walked back - an unintentional test of true friendship.

2. We all know that Lao Mou was a great soccer player; he played it with his head, in addition to his feet. He once told me proudly after a CTU inter-department soccer game that he successfully tricked the goalie on the opposite team. That goalie had played on the team representing CTU with Lao Mu many times, and knew that Lao Mou had a great penalty kick to the lower left corner. When Lao Mou was called to make a penalty kick, he first pretended to be staring at the lower left corner then suddenly kicked the ball to the lower right corner while the helpless goalie dived to the lower left corner.

3. Lao Mou is extremely talented in managing factory operations. He was once asked to come out retirement to shake up a weak factory in Texas. He started by showing the supervisor how he can hold meetings with groups of 20-40 workers each time. After each meeting, he would call each worker by name correctly. This demonstrated clearly to all factory workers that no details, large or small, can escape his watchful eyes. It is clear that many of the same management skills worked well in Taiwan also worked well in USA.

I consider myself super lucky having met Lao Mou at CTU. Over the years, it is most gratifying to learn that so many of our classmates feel the same way.

My salute and cheers to Lao Mou!

Best regards,

All,

TY was right! Lao Mou did read that piece of article authored by Shuiling, which had been brought by Lao Soong to you guys' 30th Reunion. But this tribute that Ed Soong wrote on Lao Mou's passing didn't make it to the collected eulogies in You-Sing.

I am very glad to find this evidence. Now we know Lao Mou did know he had been missed badly by his little pen pal. That's a great relief! I bet Lao Mou and Lao Soong are now talking in heaven after their little soccer game about this latest happening. But I am still curious about that open letter.

regards,ch
